Operational Good News

13 December 2006

Safer Neighbourhoods Initiative

Safer Neighbourhoods is beginning a major initiative to ensure that all Safer Neighbourhoods Teams are focussing on the priorities of young people as a key part of their work.

On Thursday 14 December 2006 between 3pm and 6pm, Safer Neighbourhoods Teams and Safer Schools Officers will attend every secondary school in London. They will also provide a presence on routes from school to home - including key transport locations. Their aim will be to provide crime prevention advice that is relevant to young people and also to begin the work of identifying the crime and disorder issues in their neighbourhoods that affect and concern young people.

The Schools Initiative forms a key part of the ongoing Anti-social Behaviour Strategy currently been addressed by Safer Neighbourhoods Teams.

12 December

TV advert launched to highlight dangers of illegal cabs

Commander Steve Allen has given his support to a new hard-hitting TV advert which highlights the dangers of using illegal cabs.

The Safer Travel At Night advert shows a young woman sitting in the back of a car chatting to her friend about their night out on a mobile phone. She starts to look confused at the route being taken by the driver, who arrives in an isolated car park. The driver is then seen getting into the back off the car.

This is the latest stage of an ongoing campaign between Mayor Ken Livingstone, Transport for London and the MPS to provide safer travel options at night, and to crack down on bogus cabs who tout illegally for business.

The campaign encourages people to be 'Cabwise' and text HOME to 60835 to receive the numbers of licensed minicab and black cab firms in the area they are texting from.

Retired plumber jailed for indecent assault

On 1 December 2006, Phillip Leonard Bignell, a 66-year-old, was found guilty of 20 counts of buggery and indecent assault on boys mainly under the age of 16 during the period of 1972 to 1990.

The jury delivered a unanimously guilty verdict on all 20 counts, which resulted in his imprisonment for 20 years.

Bignell, who is a retired plumber and had worked at Harrow School for over forty years, was arrested on 11 October 2004 following the allegations being made by four men in relation to the period between 1972 to 1990.

Over the period of a four week trial, the court heard how Bignell portrayed to the outside world a charade of being a caring, dedicated family man however, the arsenal of weaponry that Bignell was licensed to hold was used as a threat as well as a lure to the young boys.

He preyed predominantly on two young boys, the youngest being as young as seven when the assaults started. He systematically molested the two main victims throughout their youth.

12 December

Three men convicted of the murder of Lee Christopher Subaran

Lloywen Carty, aged 25, Conroy Orlando SMITH, aged 28 and Jermaine Labastide, aged 28, were part of the gang responsible for Mr Subaran's death after the Notting Hill Carnival in August 2004.

Lee Subaran was shot at point blank range for allegedly showing disrespect to Leon Roberts, a member of the notorious "Mus Luv Crew" a gang based in the Harlesden area.

Three other "Mus Luv Crew" members Leon Roberts, Tafari Dacas and Shane Taylor were all sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder on 28 July 2005. The judge recommended they each serve a minimum of 30 years.

At approx 22:20 on 30 August 2004 police, who had been working at the Notting Hill carnival, were driving along Harrow Road, when they heard several shots from firearms and saw flashes from weapons being discharged. They also received reports of an injured man in Hazel Road, next to the Community Centre.

Police and London Ambulance Service attended the scene and found a man suffering from gunshot wounds. He was taken to Central Middlesex Hospital where he was pronounced dead at approx 23:15.

The intelligence lead operation saw officers arrest the three men in West London and Essex.

One of the men was arrested after officers stopped the lorry he was driving near to the Dartford crossing.

The others, a man in his fifties and a 30-year-old, were arrested at addresses in Kilburn and Ongar, Essex. Between 60-70kg of cocaine, with an estimated street value of £2 million, was recovered from a house in Ongar.

Operational Good News

7 December

Pair jailed for robbing vulnerable man

A 40-year-old woman has been sentenced to nine years imprisonment along with her accomplice, Alan Ernest Hough, who received seven years six months at Southwark Crown Court.

Jane Louisa Tucker deliberately befriended the 60-year-old man to gain access to his home before letting three masked men, one of whom was Hough, enter the house only to rob the vulnerable man of £300 on Friday the 17 March.

The three men bound and threatened the recent stoke victim with violence until he told them where his life savings were kept. After the suspects left the victim was able to free himself and activate his emergency alarm. Tucker was seen leaving the scene arm in arm with Hough.

6 December

Kidnap and Specialist Investigation Unit Two men guilty of Kidnap

Two men have been found guilty of false imprisonment following an investigation by the Kidnap and Specialist Investigation Unit. Stephen Doyle and Mohammed Sayid were arrested following a covert operation. The men had falsely imprisoned James Surita, a man from Uxbridge, who was kidnapped at gunpoint following a drug deal.

During his ordeal, which lasted throughout that night, he was taken to various locations and forced to make a number of calls to his family asking for money to secure his release.

During the course of the investigation Mr Surita managed to escape from his captors. By this time the police had already identified two of the suspects as being Stephen and Nicola Doyle, a married couple also from the Uxbridge area. They were arrested shortly after the safe recovery of Mr Surita and following a search of their home address a firearm was recovered. A third suspect Mohammed Sayid was later arrested.

Short listed entries for Problem Solving Awards

Eight problem-solving projects have now been short listed for next year's Problem Solving Awards. The finalists will soon be submitted to the judging panel and the awards will be presented as part of a one day MPS 'Safer London Problem Solving Conference' on 21 February 2007.

In its second year, the award recognises the achievements of partnership projects between the police and local communities to reduce crime and disorder and is run in collaboration between the MPA, the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) and the Safer London Foundation (SLF), the independent charity that aims to reduce crime, promote community cohesion and develop safer neighbourhoods through innovative community led crime reduction projects.

The award celebrates initiatives that develop partnership problem-solving initiatives – in essence projects that are responsive to local needs, are people-focused and importantly address the causes of crime and disorder, not just the consequences. The projects are conceived and put into practice in partnership between local police, partners and communities.

Police Cadets delivered 3,000 property marking kits in the Abbey Road

50 Police Cadets delivered 3,000 property marking kits in the Abbey Road, Regents Park and Church Street Wards. They targeted specific areas depending on the number of burglaries that area had suffered over the previous 12 months.

The pack included: 'A guide to home security', and 'Coded for Keeps'; a window sticker and a property marking pen. It also featured the leaflet 'Immobilise'. The purpose of the Immobilise web site is that you can register all your personal belongings that have an identifying number or mark and you will have a better chance of getting the item back if it is lost or stolen.

Houses having more than one occupier are encouraged to share the use of the pen and put the sticker on the communal front door.

Brave PCs awarded at South London Press event

PC Holliday and PC Haddouche won the Patrick Dunne 999 award, which was set up to recognise emergency service staff that have gone beyond the call of duty in their dedication and selfless commitment to the job.

The officers were nominated by South London Press readers for the courage they demonstrated when they confronted 21-year-old Amir Abdul-Latif during routine patrol in Wandsworth.

In an attempt to evade being apprehended, Amir Abdul-Latif sprayed sulphuric acid into their faces, before fleeing from the scene. Both officers suffered facial burns, consistent with being in contact with the noxious substance, and are still recovering from their injuries.

Amir Abdul-Latif later appeared at Kingston Crown Court charged with two counts of GBH with intent, and was sentenced to seven years imprisonment for each count, which are to be served concurrently.

MPS wins one of the most prestigious awards in the Human Resources industry

The 'Personnel Today Award for Innovation in Recruitment and Retention' was given to the Met for their Recruitment Bus - an innovative new tool that is proving to be a driving force in the recruitment of under represented groups.

Prior to its introduction, the Met's recruitment activities were restricted to fewer locations. The Recruitment Bus gives the flexibility to visit locations across the capital where there is a high proportion of under represented groups, and provides a more informal setting for visitors.

So far, the bus has visited more than 70 different events and locations across London ranging from the opening of Europe's largest Hindu Temple to Europride. The Recruitment Bus continues to build on the success of its very first visit in December 2005 when at Haringey Town Centre over 100 people registered their interest in careers in the Met - nearly half were from black or minority ethnic groups. On a recent visit to Barking Town Centre, over 50 people recorded their interest, two thirds being from a black or minority ethnic background.

Furzedown SNT receive ACPO award

Furzedown Safer Neighbourhoods Team was awarded a commendation at the Association of Chief Police Officers' Drugs Conference in Manchester on Tuesday 21 November 2006.

PC Keeley Web represented the team as the award highlights the immediate and significant impact she has made on tackling drug problems in Furzedown.

Keeley is an officer with less than three years' service and volunteered whilst still in her probation to become a Safer Neighbourhoods officer for the challenges the role brings and the opportunity to make a difference to the community.

Her close contact with the community meant she was able to collate intelligence on drug dealers on the borough. The Furzedown team worked with the Territorial Support Group and other police units to seize a thousand cannabis plants, firearms, and the arrest of a prominent drug dealer.

Met - Track Awards

Ten young people who took part in the Met-Track event this year in Greenwich and Bexley, received awards for their hard work from Olympic Gold medallist Mark Lewis-Francis in front of an audience of 27,000 at Charlton Athletics' home ground, The Valley.

It took place at half time during the Premiership clash between Charlton and Everton.

Met-Track, which is run by the Metropolitan Police and Charlton Athletic FC, offers sport as a healthier alternative to young people who would not normally get the opportunity. The project was the brainchild of Superintendent John Powell, a sprints coach for more than 30 years.

As well as encouraging healthier lifestyles all year round through weekly training sessions, Met-Track stages a showcase week of sport for every secondary school in a borough.
